CALIS 2010年数据库培训周

中山大学 2010年5月12日

Why the need?

- Back-up in case of disaster
- Perpetual access rights
- Ensure access to content following a ‘trigger event’
 - Long-term failure of publisher’s website
 - Title ceases to be published and is removed from website
 - Title sold and new publisher does not host back data

What archives are out there?

- Portico
- LOCKSS
- CLOCKSS
- Local Load
- IOP Business Continuity Plan

Portico

- IOP joined Portico in 2006
- More than 80 Publishers are members
- Initially IOP-owned journals included
- Approval now from virtually all publishing partners
- Includes historic archive back to 1874
- Dark archive provides access to libraries signed up to Portico after a trigger event
- Post cancellation access
- <http://www.portico.org>

LOCKSS

- Allows libraries to collect subscribed journal content and store locally
- Content locally cached by library
- Available only to that institution's users
- Technical work in 2010 to make IOP content available via LOCKSS
- Post cancellation access to subscribed journals
- <http://www.lockss.org>

CLOCKSS

- Controlled LOCKSS
- Joint venture between publishers and libraries
- IOP on board of directors and is a founding publisher
- Technical work to be done in 2010
- Dark archive provides free access to all after trigger event
- Services uses LOCKSS technology to store multiple copies of digital content in a distributed archive at sites across the globe
- <http://www.clockss.org/>

Local Load

- We offer options of local loading to all customers via the STACKS gateway (www.stacks.iop.org)
- Institutions come in and download the most up to date raw data as per their license agreements
- Data format is raw XML and pdfs for the end user to adapt and make user friendly
- In China we have put all archive data on a hard drive to ship. Moving forwards seeing that updates will be smaller in size, we may be able to do this electronically and is something we should consider.

Business Continuity Programme

- Disaster recovery plan should anything happen to our in-house servers
- Local Back-up site to load our software to continue electronic access to our customers
- Timescales put in place should such an event happen.
- Trials have been undertaken to recover the data at the back up site.

Archiving initiatives

- Please let us know if you have any questions about these or other archiving initiatives
- Thank you!
